

Conditions not right for cloud seeding in K'taka

BOSKY KHANNA @Bengaluru

EVEN as the Karnataka government has formed two committees to take up cloud seeding in parts of the state in view of the drought situation, weathermen said the exercise is futile as conditions are not favourable. Weather experts have cautioned the state government during the last couple of meetings, including one held on Monday, that conditions are not favourable for undertaking cloud seeding. They have suggested that the state government defer the cloud seeding plan from September 20 to October, when conditions could turn favourable. The Southwest monsoon will continue till October 10, so there is a longer window for cloud seeding, and the government should not rush the exercise, they said.

A senior official from the Karnataka State Natural Disaster Monitoring Centre (KSNDMC), who was part of the meeting, said cloud seeding can be done when the right clouds are present. But there are no hovering clouds, and neither is there any conducive forecast in the weeks ahead. The task of tracing clouds also seems futile as there are no systems forming in the oceans for cloud formation.

Officials from the Karnataka Neeravari Nigam Limited, Rural Development and Panchayat Raj, India Meteorological Department, KSNDMC, Indian Institute of Science, Indian Institute of Tropical Meteorology, Water Resources Department, retired professionals and experts were present at Monday's meeting, where the monsoon pattern and drought situation were discussed.

"There are no thunder clouds or cumulonimbus clouds. They are usually present during the North-east monsoon, and are ideal for cloud seeding. But if there are sufficient dense clouds, there is no need for cloud seeding. This year, the systems over the Arabian Sea are poor when compared to the Bay of Bengal. This is the reason why northern parts of India are experiencing good rainfall. The monsoon trough in the Western Ghats region is helping coastal and North Karnataka get rain. But interior Karnataka and south interior Karnataka is experiencing poor rainfall," a senior IMD official said.

'We missed flood by just a day': 17 trekkers return from Nepal

ANUBHAB ROY @Bengaluru

A batch of 17 Karnataka residents, who escaped the recent flash floods in Nepal-Tibet region by a narrow margin, landed at Kempegowda International Airport (KIA) in Bengaluru on Tuesday. Two more members of the group of 23 trekkers are scheduled to arrive in the city on Wednesday.

The group arrived in Bengaluru by Nepal Airlines flight RA 225. They had gone to Nepal as part of an informal trekking group, of which the majority lacked trekking experience. They had availed the services of a Nepalese trekking company named Moon Himalaya Adventure.

"We missed the disastrous flood by just a day. We left our hotel in Nyalam (a Tibetan border town about 150km from Nepal capital Kathmandu) a day before the calamity struck the area. On the next day, we came to know that the entire hotel building was swept away by the floodwater," Shriniwasulu Yadati, who was part of the group and a Bengaluru resident, told TNIE.

The group said they returned on a regular flight booked months in advance as part of their itinerary. They said they received phone calls from Karnataka State Disaster Management Authority officials, but did not require any help from the state government, as they were away from the areas affected by the flash floods. "We spoke to Chief Minister DK Shivakumar on a video call, and he enquired about our safety," said a member of the group. "We asked for some assistance, especially because our journey to Kathmandu from Darchen (Tibet) to board our flight involved traversing through perilous roads, but that was not an area in which the state government, understandably, could help. The government was coordinating only via phone calls, nothing beyond that," Yadati said.
