Hosps told to report adverse events linked to med devices

Anuja.Jaiswal

New Delhi: A faulty insulin pump that delivers too much insulin, an infusion pump that gives medicines too quickly, a pulse oximeter showing incorrect oxygen levels or a defibrillator failing during a cardiac emergency will now come under a more systematic hospital safety-monitoring system.

The Indian Pharmacopoeia Commission (IPC) has issued a new guidance document asking hospitals to strengthen monitoring and reporting of adverse events linked to medical devices. Serious adverse events have to be reported to the Materiovigilance Programme of India (MvPI) within 15 days, while non-serious adverse events and certain potentially harmful near-miss incidents have to be reported within 30 days.

Patients too have a direct role. Those who notice that a medical device is not functioning properly or experience an adverse event can inform the treating hospital or healthcare professional and directly report suspected device-related events to IPC.

IPC has provided a toll-free helpline, 1800-180-3024, for consumers and other stakeholders. It supports reporting in 10 languages, including Hindi, Bengali, Tamil, Telugu and Malayalam.

Importantly, the system is not limited to cases in which a patient is actually injured. A device malfunction or quality problem detected before use can be treated as a near miss. If it could potentially cause harm during future use, it is reportable within 30 days even when no patient has been harmed.

The guidance document also says suspected device-related events should be reported even when it has not yet been established that the device caused the problem, allowing the event to be assessed and investigated further.

2 brothers swept away by Subansiri during rituals at Lakhimpur ghat

Dibrugarh: Two brothers were swept away by the strong current of the Subansiri river while performing a ritual at Ghagar Ghat in Lakhimpur district on Monday.

The missing men were identified as Ganesh Baruah (44) and his younger brother Bhairab Baruah (40), residents of Chamua village. Ganesh worked as an accountant in the education department at Dhakuakhana, while Bhairab was a contractual employee of the panchayat and rural development department at Gharmora.

According to residents, the brothers went to Ghagar Ghat following a priest's advice to offer prayers and religious items in the river. They reportedly performed the ritual after being told their "Rahu-Ketu" was unfavourable.

At around 10.15 am, the brothers entered the river to offer the items while the priest remained at the ghat. Their mother was also present.

Ganesh was caught in the current and swept away. Bhairab, who was standing nearby, reportedly tried to save his elder brother but was also carried away.

"Ganesh was swept away in the current. Bhairab tried to help his brother, but the current was too strong, and he was also swept away," an elderly resident said.

State Disaster Response Force (SDRF) was informed, and they launched a search operation. Rescue personnel deployed boats and divers to search for the brothers.

"Teams have been deployed, and the search operation is continuing with boats and divers. We are making every effort to trace the two missing persons," rescue personnel said.

The brothers could not be traced till Monday afternoon.

The incident left the family and residents of Chamua village in shock. Both men are survived by their wives, one daughter each, and their mother. Their father died a couple of months ago.
