Forest guard among three held for trying to sell 2 elephant tusks

The trio was arrested for attempt to sell two elephant tusks that had been illegally stashed in a house in Amaravathi, under Anamalai Tiger Reserve (ATR), Tiruppur district | EXPRESS

EXPRESS NEWS SERVICE @ Tiruppur

THE forest department on Wednesday arrested a trio, including a forest guard, in connection with an attempt to sell two elephant tusks that had been illegally stashed in a house in Amaravathi, under Anamalai Tiger Reserve (ATR), Tiruppur district.

The suspects were identified as A Mariappan (49), who works as a forest guard in the Udumalaipet forest range; K Kannimuthu (52), a wage worker; both from Parai, a tribal settlement in Amaravathi Nagar; and R Vijayakumar (29), of Amaravathi Nagar.

Forest department sources said, at around 3 pm on September 7, photographs of two elephant tusks were received from an unidentified WhatsApp number by Senthil Murugan, FRO of Amaravathi. An inquiry into the phone number revealed that it belonged to Sakthi of Amaravathi.

During questioning, Sakthi allegedly disclosed that the photographs had been sent to him by Surya of Parai settlement.

Further inquiry with Surya revealed that Mariappan, also from Parai settlement, had contacted him and asked him to photograph the elephant tusks.

The investigation subsequently revealed that Mariappan was a forest guard working at the Kuzhipatti beat under the Udumalaipet range. On Tuesday evening, a team of officials secured Mariappan and inquired. During questioning, he revealed that he had taken the tusks from the forest and handed them over to Kannimuthu.

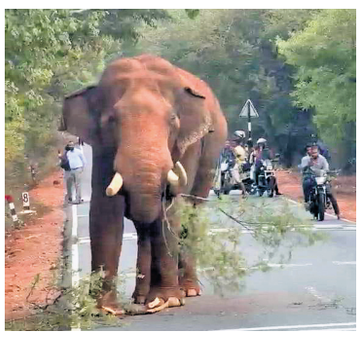
Further investigation led officials to Vijayakumar, who runs a fish shop in Amaravathi. The tusks had allegedly been handed over to him and were kept at his residence.

Based on the information gathered during the investigation, a team of forest officials conducted a search at Vijayakumar's residence, at around 2 am on Wednesday, and seized both elephant tusks. "Both tusks are about 56.5 cm and 61 cm long. Further investigation is under way to determine the exact source of the tusks and ascertain whether any other individuals or wildlife crime networks were involved in the illegal possession and movement of the elephant tusks," a senior official said.

"Mariyappan, who was arrested in this case, had served as an Anti-Poaching Watcher (APW) before being promoted," sources said.

Elderly woman attacked by jumbo succumbs to injuries

ERODE: A 70-year-old woman who was injured after being attacked by a wild elephant near Anthiyur in Erode district died without responding to treatment at the Coimbatore Government Medical College Hospital on Wednesday. The deceased was identified as Rasammal (70), of Kovilur near Anthiyur. On the midnight of September 1, a wild elephant that had strayed out of the forest area near Selambooramman Temple entered the Kovilur area. Forest officials were attempting to drive it back into the forest when Rasammal unexpectedly came out of the house. The elephant suddenly attacked her. She was initially admitted to Anthiyur Government Hospital and was later shifted to Coimbatore Government Medical College Hospital. However, she died on Wednesday. ENS



Wild jumbo 'Baahubali' injured in elephant attack

EXPRESS NEWS SERVICE @ Coimbatore

A wild elephant, nicknamed Baahubali, was allegedly injured after being attacked by another male elephant in Mettupalayam. Forest department staff, with the assistance of a veterinarian, are attempting to provide treatment to the animal.

Baahubali has remained a dominant male elephant in the region over the last six years. However, Baahubali is seen as a calm elephant and has not disturbed humans so far. He is often seen crossing the Mettupalayam-Coonoor Road at night.

According to forest sources, a few days ago, another male elephant attacked Baahubali, leaving him with injuries on his back and tail. The injured animal was seen walking with difficulty.

"It seems there is no major injury. However, we need to intervene if the animal continues to bleed. The bleeding has stopped for now, and we hope the injuries will heal soon. If not, we will start providing medicines mixed with fruits wherever the animal is moving. However, we are yet to resort to the practice," said a forest department official in Mettupalayam Forest Range.

'Awareness on vulture-safe drugs vital to protect species'

EXPRESS NEWS SERVICE @ Coimbatore

A three-year study conducted by Arulagam, an NGO involved in vulture conservation in the Nilgiri Biosphere Reserve (NBR), between 2023 and 2026, has highlighted the need to raise awareness in the veterinary sector of the potentially harmful impact of non-steroidal anti-inflammatory drugs (NSAIDs) on vultures in the Coimbatore, Erode and Nilgiris districts. The findings also suggested that the Tamil Nadu Animal Husbandry Department should promote ethnoveterinary practices as a sustainable, cost-effective approach to reducing dependence on conventional veterinary treatments.

The study showed that the Mudumalai Tiger Reserve (MTR) remains the main breeding ground for white-rumped vultures, with nine nesting sites along the riverbanks recorded. The MTR and the Sathyamangalam Tiger Reserve (STR) also provide vital nesting habitats for Indian vultures and solitary red-headed vultures. The presence of large mixed-species foraging and roosting congregations, accounting for up to 36.8% of individuals in STR, further indicates the landscape's high carrying capacity.

"Systematic vulture surveys were conducted between 2024 and 2026 across 46 sites in MTR and 36 sites in STR. In MTR, the highest vulture encounter rate was recorded in the Segur Range (12.1%), with the White-rumped Vulture (Gyps bengalensis) being the most frequently encountered species across the surveyed sites. In STR, Sulthanpet Camp, located in the Thalamalai Range, recorded the highest encounter rate (16.1%), indicating its significance as an important vulture congregation area," said S Bharathidasan, secretary of Arulagam.

Survey of veterinary pharmacies found that meloxicam was available in all of the pharmacies surveyed, indicating the widespread adoption of vulture-safe alternatives for treating livestock. Notably, no instances of diclofenac being available or sold were documented in Tamil Nadu during the survey period. However, this must be ensured in neighbouring areas, said Bharathidasan.

He added that community-based interventions promoting traditional livestock healthcare practices had shown encouraging results, with around 203 cattle owners adopting ethno-veterinary practices as part of their routine livestock management. In addition, the research team has proposed that GPS tagging is essential in the current context.

The study identified four interconnected threats that contribute to the vulnerability of vulture populations. These include poisoning caused by pesticides and chemicals entering the food chain, and the deliberate poisoning of carcasses in retaliation, collisions and electrocution caused by high-tension power lines, changes in carcass disposal methods and livestock-rearing practices.

Leopard caught in cage set up for man-eater tiger in O-Valley range

EXPRESS NEWS SERVICE @ Nilgiris

A leopard was caught in one of the cages set up to capture a man-eater tiger in the O' Valley forest range of the Gudalur forest division on Wednesday morning.

Locals, who noticed the leopard's movement after it was trapped in a cage in the Baram area, informed the forest department. A team of forest staff from the range visited the spot and confirmed that a leopard had been trapped.

The animal appeared aggressive and panicked after being caught in the cage, which had been baited with a live goat. The goat, which had been tied at the rear end of the cage, remained safe as the cage automatically closed after the leopard entered. Meanwhile, a few locals captured videos of the incident.

As the leopard was not considered problematic and had been unexpectedly caught in the cage, forest officials transported the cage to a nearby forest area, about 1km away, and released the animal.

Meanwhile, the engagement of kumki elephants in the operation to tranquilise the man-eater tiger continued for the 20th day on Wednesday.
