

Fly ash slurry from Mettur power plant inundates 10 acres of agricultural fields

EXPRESS NEWS SERVICE @ Salem

FLY ash slurry from the Mettur Thermal Power Station has entered agricultural fields behind the plant, inundating nearly 10 acres and damaging crops such as maize, onion and cotton. Residents and farmers in the area have urged the authorities to immediately inspect the affected fields and take steps to prevent further spread of the ash.

The Mettur Thermal Power Station has two plants — MTPS-I, comprising four generating units of 210 MW each, and MTPS-II, which has a single 600 MW generating unit. The two plants together have an installed generation capacity of 1,440 MW.

Both plants generate electricity by burning coal, during which large quantities of ash are produced as a by-product. The ash generated at the station is broadly handled as dry fly ash and wet ash.

A portion of the fly ash is supplied to cement factories and other industries for utilisation. The remaining ash is mixed with water and stored in designated ash ponds, as dry fly ash cannot be stored in the open due to the risk of it being dispersed by wind.

Recently, water mixed with ash reportedly leaked from the storage area at the rear of the power station and entered the agricultural fields located nearby. The ash slurry spread several metres into the fields, with water and ash inundating nearly 10 acres of agricultural land.

Farmers said standing crops, including maize, onion and cotton, had been affected after the ash slurry entered the fields. They expressed concern that the continued presence of ash and slurry could further affect agricultural land and crops if the issue was not addressed immediately.

MAN KILLS KIN ON SUSPICION OF SORCERY

Krishnagiri : A 27-year-old man allegedly killed his 52-year-old relative near Denkanikottai after he suspected that she had performed sorcery on his family. The deceased was identified as R Sarasamma of Kandaganapalli village. The suspect was identified as S Ashok of Kandaganapalli. Four days ago, Ashok quarrelled with his aunt Sarasamma, accusing her of performing sorcery against his family which brought them bad luck. On Monday night, Ashok, who was allegedly drunk, entered Sarasamma's house when the door was not locked and killed her. Sarasamma's husband R Sivappa (59) woke up when Ashok was about to leave and tried to catch him, but the latter fled. The body was sent to Government Krishnagiri Medical College Hospital for autopsy. Late on Monday, Ashok was detained and arrested on Tuesday. ENS

Parents protest inundation at govt school in Kachupalli

EXPRESS NEWS SERVICE @ Salem

THE repeated inundation of a government higher secondary school at Kachupalli angered parents and residents, who blocked the Konganapuram-Omalur main road in protest on Tuesday, demanding a solution.

Over 500 students study at the school in Kachupalli. Following heavy rain on Monday night, rainwater accumulated near the school premises, leaving students struggling to enter the campus. Residents said the problem had been recurring during heavy rain, and alleged that repeated complaints to the authorities had not resulted in any permanent solution. They said a water channel meant to drain rainwater from the area had allegedly been encroached upon and blocked, causing water to accumulate around the school.

Demanding that the authorities clear the obstruction and ensure proper water drainage, parents and residents gathered near the Kachupalli bus stop and blocked the main road for over an hour. Konganapuram police reached the spot and held talks with the protesters. The blockade was subsequently withdrawn after the police assured that appropriate steps would be taken to address the issue. Residents urged the authorities to inspect the drainage channel, remove any obstructions and take permanent measures to prevent rainwater from entering the school premises.

Traps set up to nab leopard near Palacode

EXPRESS NEWS SERVICE @ Dharmapuri

THE forest department has set up a cage to trap a leopard that entered human settlements and caught a hen from a house near Palacode in Dharmapuri district on late on Monday.

P Vinyagam (48), a farmer of Vazhathottam village in Erranahalli panchayat was residing with his family in a farm land, which is few hundred metres away from Erranahalli Reserved Forest. On Monday night, a leopard entered inside his premises and caught a hen from a chicken coop and fled. The incident was recorded on a CCTV camera installed by the farmer in his house. Last year in June, a leopard hunted a hen from Vinyagam's house. While the forest department had already asked farmers to protect their livestock using iron cages. But, Vinyagam had instead used a chicken coop made up of bamboo. "We have been checking CCTV footages at six places fixed inside and outside of the forest. A leopard cage was set up at Vazhathottam village near the forest boundary. Since Tuesday morning, 25 forest department staff including 12 from the Rapid Response Team were giving door-to-door awareness in the villages near forest boundaries like, Vazhathottam, Erranahalli, Kaveriyapankottai, P Chettihalli," forest department officials told TNIE.
